Pike plans to pull out of TIRAC

By HUMPHREY S. TYLER
Ottaway News Service

MILFORD — The Pike County Commissioners want to pull out of the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council (TIRAC), because they claim its director is a proponent of the $390-million project on the Delaware River.

Although the three-man board of commissioners hasn't formally voted to withdraw from the seven-county planning agency, they did notify TIRAC officials this week that they intend to dissolve their ties with the council at its June 10 meeting.

The letter to Thomas Klock, TIRAC director-secretary, said the commissioners will state their reasons for quitting the seven-year-old agency at the meeting. But Commissioner James Duffy said Thursday the county wants to withdraw because Klock has "been trying to be too forceful on the pro side" of the project.

"Pike County has historically been against the Tocks Island Dam," he said. "For us to belong to a council that is pro-Tocks Island is ridiculous. If we are going to be against Tocks Island then Klock should be too. But he's not. He's pro-Tocks Island."

Klock objected to being called a proponent of the project and said he has only taken positions authorized by TIRAC's membership.

"The positions that I have taken," he said, "have reflected the opinions of the council. It's unfortunate they feel this way. They should have come to me before they made this decision."

TIRAC was formed in 1965 to deal with the effects of the dam-recreation area on a regional basis. Besides Pike, its members include Orange and Sullivan counties in New York, Sussex and Warren counties in New Jersey, and Monroe and Northampton counties.

One of TIRAC's original architects was Jules W. Marron, Sussex County planning director. He reacted sadly Thursday to the news that Pike is going to pull out.

"They're going to regret it," he said, "because someday they are going to be sorry they didn't stick it out when they apply for federal funds. The federal government likes to fund regional planning groups rather than local government units."

Marron conceded that Klock's position on several issues was part of the reasons for Pike's withdrawal, but he said the commissioners' attitude is "don't tell me what to do."

Duffy said TIRAC has "outlived its usefulness" and it hasn't "measured up to what it was supposed to be," since it was originally formed to be an objective planning group but "has turned into a pro-Tocks Island organization."

Monroe County Commissioners

chairman Nancy Shukaitis, a TIRAC member, agreed with her Pike County counterparts. "The council hasn't taken up the important issues," she said. "The Pike County Commissioners must feel their voice isn't being heard."

Mrs. Shukaitis, who has criticized and opposed the Tocks Dam for seven years, refused to speculate about the meaning of Pike County's action. "Actually, I haven't had enough time to assess the meaning of Pike County's move."

Mrs. Shukaitis said the TIRAC counties should evaluate TIRAC's performance but added she would not initiate such an evaluation discussion.

"I think that automatically will be done when they (TIRAC members) see what Pike County has done. The discussion on the whole subject will be taken at the June meeting," she said.

Nixon, Brezhnev tackle Vietnam sources reveal

MOSCOW (UPI)—The United States and Russia signed their fifth summit agreement Thursday, aimed at averting dangerous harassment incidents on the high seas, amid clear indications that President Nixon and his Soviet hosts had finally tackled the Vietnam issue.

Although there was no public acknowledgment from either side, and highly unlikely to be any, diplomatic sources said Vietnam almost certainly was taken up during Nixon's marathon sessions with Soviet Communist leader Leonid I. Brezhnev on Wednesday.

High American officials were reported to have disclosed that Vietnam was discussed at length, but that neither side showed signs of changing positions on the issue that overshadows the entire eight-day summit but which has not obstructed progress in other areas of Soviet-American concern.

Nixon's five-hour meeting with Soviet leaders in Brezhnev's country estate Wednesday night included a discussion of "the international situation" during a motor launch ride down the Moscow River, the White House said.

After Nixon returned to his Kremlin apartment at nearly 1 a. m., his national security adviser, Henry A. Kissinger, continued talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in the latter's Kremlin office for four hours, until the first rays of dawn.

Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist party and dominant figure in the Soviet hierarchy, made no public appearances Thursday and attended neither of the two negotiating sessions at the Kremlin during the day. He was conspicuously absent from the evening Bolshoi ballet performance of Tchaikovsky's "Swan Lake" in honor of the Nixons.

Brezhnev's absence Thursday was explained by chief Soviet press spokesman Leonid I. Zamyatin in this way:

"At the beginning of the talks it was agreed to hold meetings either on a broad or narrow scale—this is what actually has been the case. There have been broad and more restricted meetings, depending on necessity. Such a practice will be continued. Brezhnev will continue to participate in subsequent meetings."

Nixon attended a late morning, two-hour meeting with Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and President Nikolai V. Podgorny, accompanied by Kissinger and Secretary of State William P. Rogers. In the afternoon, Rogers and Kosygin discussed Soviet-American trade in a one-hour, 52-minute session which the White House described as "constructive and business-like."

Neither Nixon nor Brezhnev attended a later signing of the incidents-at-sea agreement in Vladimir Hall which the White House called "the first high-level, military-to-military agreement between the United States and Soviets since World War II."

Navy Secretary John W. Warner and Adm. Sergei Gorskov, commander-in-chief of the Soviet navy, used red pens to sign the agreement which, like the four previous accords concluded in Moscow, had been under negotiation for many months in both capitals.

The agreement is intended to end what the U. S. Navy calls "chicken of the sea" incidents of recent years, involving minor collisions, near-misses, airplane buzzings, and simulated attacks between American and Soviet naval vessels.

The agreement, reaffirming and broadening existing international accords on "rules of the road" and safety at sea, calls for greater use of warning signals, a ban on simulated attacks and staying clear of aircraft carriers. It applies to naval vessels and planes of both countries in international waters.

But summit officials seemed confident that a Strategic Arms Limitation (SALT) agreement, still under negotiation, could be concluded in time for signing today. Soviet spokesman Zamyatin saw no hint of last-minute trouble in the failure of U. S. and Soviet SALT negotiators to fly here Thursday from Helsinki.

Strict rules set for two navies

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The agreement signed in Moscow Thursday to stop a deadly "game of chicken of the sea" between the U. S. and Soviet navies sets strict rules for each nation to follow when shadowing naval activities of the other—but does not prohibit such surveillance.

Overzealous surveillance in the past has resulted in more than 100 close calls, including at least three minor warship collisions, one incident where U. S. and Russian planes bumped wingtips in flight, and the crash of one Soviet plane which killed the crew.

A White House statement hailed the new accord as the "first high level, military-to-military agreement between the United States and the Soviets since World War II."

Negotiators of the agreement broke new ground by including air activities over the high seas as well as naval surface maneuvers. They also reaffirmed both nations' determination "to observe strictly the letter and the spirit" of international rules of the road spelled out in the 1958 Geneva Convention on the high seas.

"Both sides agreed there was some harassment going on," one U. S. source said. "It was just two navies out there playing a game of chicken. That was what it amounted to, and something bad was bound to happen sooner or later."

The agreement was negotiated by diplomatic and military teams headed by John W. Warner, then undersecretary of the U. S. Navy, and Fleet Adm. Vladimir Kasatonov, deputy commander-in-chief of the Soviet Navy, during sessions in Moscow in 1971 and in Washington last month.

Senators praise SALT pact but oppose ABM treaty

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Senate leaders praised President Nixon Thursday for progress on an arms limitation agreement with the Soviet Union, but continued criticism of a proposed ABM treaty raised the prospect of a protracted struggle for Senate ratification. Republican Leader Hugh Scott said the ceiling on strategic arms would lead to reduced tensions between the two countries. He said he had "no fear that this President or any president would knowingly unilaterally weaken the country."

Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield congratulated Nixon "for his substantial achievements" at the Moscow summit talks. Criticism, however, continued to emerge from the Senate Armed Services Committee which will have a substantial voice in the debate over ratification.

Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., said he had "serious reservations" about the treaty. Two other members of the committee, Sens. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and Barry Goldwater

R-Ariz., already have expressed their doubts.

Jackson said Thursday he believed the treaty would limit not only the numbers of nuclear-tipped ballistic missiles deployed by both sides, but their size. He said this means that the United States would be frozen with 1,054 land-based intercontinental missiles with warheads equivalent to less than two megatons of TNT, while the Soviet Union would have 1,600 missiles—including SS9s big enough to thrust a 25-megaton payload plus 26 more which Jackson predicted the Soviets were preparing to deploy in the 50-megaton range. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which is expected to favor the agreement overwhelmingly, will have jurisdiction over the treaty. A two-thirds Senate majority is needed for ratification of treaties.

Only the defensive missile end of the agreement is being handled as a treaty at the Moscow talks, with the offensive limitation being negotiated as an executive agreement not requiring Senate ratification.

No tax increases planned by Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The White House said Thursday that President Nixon planned no tax increases in the foreseeable future and would keep expenditures in line by cutting back on government operating costs.

John D. Ehrlichman, Nixon's chief adviser on domestic affairs, met with reporters to respond to a report by the Brookings Institution, a prestigious, private group devoted to economic research. It said Wednesday that defense and social programs were proliferating at such a rapid pace that the government has run out of money to pay for them.

"My difference with the Brookings analysis is that it rejects any possibility of effecting economies in the operation of the federal government," Ehrlichman said. He said the federal budget for some time had been deliberately expansionary in order to stimulate the economy but that the need for this was ending.

"We know how much we have used in the federal government to stimulate the economy and this gives us a feel for how much we can cut it," Ehrlichman said.

He said Nixon may propose some changes in the federal tax structure but that these would be substitutes for existing taxes. One such example under study is a value added tax on manufactured goods to eliminate that portion of property taxes which goes for financing school programs.

While this would mean a lessening of property taxes, it would also likely result in a net increase in federal taxes.

Ehrlichman pointed out that President Nixon already has asked Congress to do away with several, unworkable federal programs. He also said that 110 existing federal programs would be turned over to state and local governments under President Nixon's program for sharing revenues with state and local governments.

Ehrlichman said that Congress must cooperate fully in order for Nixon's efforts to cut spending to succeed.

$20 question real stumper for thief

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI)—It was only the $20 question but for one would-be robber it was a stumper.

Authorities said a bandit approached a convenience market clerk Wednesday with intent to rob, but it didn't work out that way.

The conversation between clerk, Donald Wiese, and bandit went something like this:

Bandit: Give me all your money from the safe and cash register.

Clerk: Do you have a gun?

B: No, but I got something better.

C: Well, if you don't have a gun, there's nothing you can do to get the money from me.

B: Well, er, uh,...

C: Look, there's only $20 in the register. I don't keep much in there. Sometimes I can't even make change for a twenty. Look at it this way. Twenty bucks. If you get caught, it will be 25 years in jail. That's less than a dollar a year.

The bandit, at a loss for words, and getting the worst of the conversation, put his hands in his pockets, turned around and walked out.

Nuclear pact probable

MOSCOW — Some problems apparently delayed final agreement on an accord limiting nuclear arms. But U.S. and Soviet bargainers are due in Moscow today, and sources say the pact probably will be signed.

NVA continues drive

SAIGON — Enemy troops occupied part of Kontum, made heavy attacks north of Hue. The North Vietnamese slipped into Kontum, and enemy gunners launched an intense artillery attack on the city. Informed sources said the handful of U.S. civil advisers still in Kontum were flown out in late afternoon, but advisers to South Vietnamese military units apparently stayed behind. On the northern front, South Vietnamese Marines drove back enemy attackers who got within 300 yards of a command post near Hue. At An Loc, meanwhile, some 4,000 civilians finally managed to flee the town, walking nine miles to a government-held village. They had been unable to escape previously. Observers said the infiltration and heavy shelling of Kontum could signal an all-out assault on the central highlands provincial capital.

Horse racing probed

WASHINGTON — A scheme to race fast horses under the names of slower thoroughbreds was described by Paul Berube, a special investigator for the Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau. He told the House Crime Committee that, at 12 tracks in nine states between November 1970 and March 1972, six horses of superior racing ability were found to have raced using the names of 12 different horses. They won at least 14 of 41 races, he said. The FBI and a federal grand jury are investigating, Berube said, and "it's my expectation that indictments will follow."

Cancer fight to increase

WASHINGTON — Improved treatment of cancer through clinical treatment centers is an immediate goal of Frank J. Rauscher Jr., the head of the new national cancer program. He hopes the centers will extend to many more patients the use of drugs and other presently known techniques that work against about 15 per cent of all cancers. But his long-range goal is prevention of the disease by developing vaccines, eliminating cancer-causing substances in the environment and gaining new insights into the process that causes cancer.

Candidates slugging it out for California primary win

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Hubert Humphrey and George McGovern dropped their "impersonal" approach Thursday and began slugging it out in the primary fight to win California's 271 delegate votes at the Democratic National Convention.

Humphrey charged that McGovern's proposal to cut the defense budget by $32.4 billion over the next three years was "dangerous to our national self interest" and would create serious problems of unemployment.

McGovern lashed out at Humphrey's assertion that the two men had virtually identical records on the Vietnam War, terming it "the most outrageous nonsense and demonstration of gall that I think I've seen."

The two senators again were off on morning to midnight slumping and plane hopping in the crucial battle for victory in the June 6 primary.

Speaking at an Orange County luncheon in Anaheim, Humphrey said there was no more vital issue before the nation than military reduction and that McGovern's "unilateral" proposals could lead to disaster. "Senator McGovern's proposals are unrelated to realities of Soviet power, intentions and capabilities," Humphrey said.

"As such, they are dangerous to the best interest of our national security. The thorough and almost complete cessation of all of our strategic weapons programs is about as likely to produce mutual arms reduction as depleting your strike fund is likely to produce concessions by management" in labor negotiations.

McGovern, at a news conference in San Diego where he began the day's campaigning, said it was nonsense to say he and Humphrey have had parallel positions on the Vietnam War.

"From the time Hubert Humphrey entered the vice presidency in 1965 to the latter part of his Presidential campaign in 1968, he has been a firm and unwavering supporter of the Johnson war policies. He was a firm and committed believer," McGovern said.

Committee confirms Shultz

WASHINGTON (UPI) — George P. Shultz, President Nixon's choice to be new Treasury secretary, won quick approval Thursday from the Senate Finance Committee.

The committee also voted to approve three other Treasury nominees by President Nixon after a hearing in which Shultz testified that he felt a tariff system would be a fairer way of regulating oil imports to the United States than the present quota system.

In questioning on his appointment to succeed John B. Connally, Shultz also said that tax reform should be high on the administration's agenda next year. Early in the Nixon administration, Shultz headed a White House task force that investigated the nation's oil import policy. The chief conclusion was that tariffs were preferable to quotas and Shultz stuck by this conclusion under questioning Thursday.

"On the whole, my preference is a tariff rather than a quota system," he said.

Shultz' appointment is expected to be confirmed with little or no opposition by the full Senate.

The Finance Committee also voted approval of Charles E. Walker to be deputy Treasury secretary. Edwin S. Cohen to succeed Walker as undersecretary and Lee H. Henkel Jr. to be chief counsel of the Internal Revenue Service.

Davis trial may end next week

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — Prosecution and defense attorneys in the Angela Davis murder trial Thursday outlined before the judge their plans for winding up the case next week. The defense said it had not decided whether Miss Davis will make her own final argument.

A scheduled courtroom session for today was cancelled and the final stages of the trial before deliberation were to be crammed into next week's holiday — shortened four-day calendar.

It will be the 14th week since jury selection began on Feb. 28.

The defense rested Wednesday after a brief three-day presentation. All that remained were rebuttal, final arguments and the instructions of Judge Richard E. Arnason before the case goes to the all-white jury of seven women and five men.

Miss Davis, a 28-year-old former UCLA philosophy instructor, is charged with conspiring to bring about the events of Aug. 7, 1970, when 17-year-old Jonathan Jackson invaded a Marin County courtroom and furnished guns to three San Quentin convicts participating in a trial there.

Bremer followed Nixon to Canada

OTTAWA (UPI) — Royal Canadian Mounted Police and U.S. government sources confirmed Thursday that Arthur Bremer, accused of trying to assassinate Gov. George C. Wallace, was in Ottawa during President Nixon's visit.

Both sources said Bremer's face was clearly evident in a picture taken in a crowd on Parliament Hill during one of Nixon's public appearances in the April 13-15 visit. They had no further comment.

In the picture, published by the Ottawa Citizen, the man identified as Bremer appears to be wearing the same dark glasses and fixed grin which were shown in pictures of him at a Wallace rally in Wheaton, Md., on May 15. The Alabama governor was shot later in the day at Laurel, Md.

The Ottawa sources an investigation carried out by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at the request of the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation, revealed that Bremer had stayed at the Lord Elgin Hotel in downtown Ottawa during the visit.

Woman sought in explosions

HEIDELBERG, Germany (UPI) — Police said Thursday a slim, dark-haired woman was being sought as a suspect in the bombing of the U.S. Army's Europe headquarters in which three servicemen were killed and five other persons injured.

A police spokesman said the woman, aged between 25 and 30, was believed to have been in one of two stolen automobiles in which the explosives apparently were carried into parking lots in the headquarters complex in this West German city.

The bombs exploded Wednesday, killing Capt. Clyde R. Bonner, 29, of El Paso, Tex.; Spec. 6 Ronald A. Woodward, 28, of Lansing, Mich.; and Spec. 5 Charles L. Peck, 23, of Charleston, W. Va.

Five other persons suffered injuries in the double blasts, which tore a hole in the wall of a building housing data processing computers, destroyed about a dozen automobiles and smashed windows of buildings surrounding the separate parking lots.

The police spokesman said the explosives probably were contained in two West German autos stolen from Bensberg and

Rights coalition to fight anti-busing bill in House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Alarmed by a lopsided Senate vote to limit busing for school integration, a huge civil rights coalition Thursday marshalled its forces to defeat the measure in the House.

The 63-35 Senate vote Wednesday buoyed up hopes among backers of the proposed restrictions on busing that they will get a victory in the House when it comes to a vote expected in about two weeks.

Rep. Carl D. Perkins, D-Ky., who will manage the legislation on the House floor, said the size of the Senate vote "certainly will help in getting House passage of the bill."

Within 24 hours after the Senate action, representatives of 127 civil rights groups making up the National Leadership Conference on Civil Rights held an emergency meeting in New York to plan efforts to defeat the bill.

Chairman Roy Wilkins said this bill and other pending antibusing proposals are "the greatest threat to this country's pursuit of equality that has arisen since the end of the Reconstruction period."

The antibusing provisions tacked on a higher education finance bill would delay the effect of any federal judge's busing orders for 18 months in any case still eligible for appeal.

The antibusing rider also would prevent the federal government from allocating funds for busing unless local school officials request it. It would prohibit all federally "forced" busing, unless it is "constitutionally required" to protect minority rights.

These provisions represented a compromise with much stronger busing prohibitions the House had adopted earlier.

The House moratorium language was identical to that in the compromise bill except that its life was not limited to 18 months. The original house language also would have banned the use of federal funds for busing under any circumstances.

Wilkins and other civil rights leaders indicated their main concern was that enactment of any form of suppression of busing would set precedents that might lead to "erosion" of other constitutional rights.

For this reason, they said, the hastily launched campaign of the National Leadership Conference will be directed against this bill and all the pending antibusing measures that may emerge in its wake.

The Conference named Howard Glickstein, former staff director of the U. S. Civil Rights Commission, as coordinator of its "marshalling of forces" against the proposed antibusing legislation and the "hysteria over school busing that is sweeping the nation."

Glickstein briefed Capitol reporters in Washington on the conference plans Thursday morning with the provision that his remarks not be published until after the meeting.

Hospital gets daily crank calls, threats

SILVER SPRING, Md. (UPI) — As George C. Wallace's doctors reported no basic change in his condition Thursday, Holy Cross Hospital disclosed that it had gotten "a great many" crank calls and bomb threats since the Alabama governor was admitted 10 days ago.

Hospital spokesman Thomas Burke said the threats began immediately after Wallace was brought into the emergency room and they have continued daily while the governor lay partially paralyzed from a bullet lodged in his spinal area.

The calls have prompted repeated searches for explosive devices, he said, because "we dare not ignore these threats in light of the events which brought Gov. Wallace to our hospital" and last week's bombing of a restroom in the Defense Department.

In their latest medical advisory bulletin, doctors treating the governor said they had performed minor surgery on him in the morning to relieve accumulation of pus in two areas which was believed to be causing him abdominal pains.

Aside from these incisions, the doctors said "the remainder of the governor's condition continues stable," that his key bodily functions all were normal and that the "neurological condition of the lower extremities" — paralysis of his legs — "remains unchanged."

Scottish soccer fans riot in celebration of victory

BARCELONA (UPI) — Scottish soccer fans, celebrating their team's victory in a European championship play-off, rioted after the game in Barcelona's stadium and then went on a nightlong rampage of violence Wednesday and Thursday.

Spanish police said one person died, apparently from a heart attack, when about 20,000 Scottish fans streamed onto the stadium field following the Glasgow Rangers' 3-2 European Cup play-off victory over the Moscow Dinamos Wednesday night. Another 150 persons were injured.

Thirty-two of the injured were policemen who tried to control the Scottish fans.

Among those hospitalized were two policemen with serious head wounds, a Scottish fan who fell from a bleacher and another Scot suffering acute alcohol poisoning.

Police said 15 persons were arrested and charged with attacking officers.

Spain protested formally to Britain about the violence. A foreign ministry spokesman said British Charge D'Affairs Robin Forgharson was called to the ministry to receive the complaint, which British officials said would be relayed to London.

Damage at the Stadium ran into the tens of thousands of dollars, officials said. They said 2,000 empty liquor bottles were collected from the playing field following the game.

Lev Yashin, an official of the Moscow team, said the violence could have been worse and praised Spanish police for their "heroic action against this mob of drunks."

Gustav Wiederkehr of Switzerland, president of the European Football Union, said a special meeting would be held to consider a protest by Moscow Dinamo officials who asked for a rematch with the Rangers.

The Russian officials said the Scottish fans invaded the field three times and hit one of their players on the head with a bottle.

The violence was not limited to the soccer stadium.

Police said the fans wrecked furniture and smashed windows in four hotels before leaving for the airport where they did more damage before boarding planes for home Thursday.

Spain's state-controlled Radio Nacional blamed the violence on the Scottish visitors, saying "nothing could make up for the damages and the disgusting show they produced." The radio cited one incident in which a Scottish girl was said to have "displayed her charms by taking off her sweater" following the Glasgow win.

P.A. club donates $1,000 to build school in Africa

PEN ARGYL — At the last meeting of the school year of the World Affairs Club of the Pen Argyl Area High School, the club made a contribution of $61.39 to complete the fund-raising in the Pen Argyl, Plainfield, Wind Gap area to build a second Peace Corps School in Sub-Saharan Africa.

The final contribution brought the club's total donation for the school to $1,000.

Last year, the Pen Argyl Area students and adults contributed enough money for the construction of a school in Woe, Ghana.

Contributions to this second school came from church organizations, such as the Young Couples Class of the Plicksville Union Sunday School, the Fritz Adult Fellowship of the Fritz Memorial United Methodist Church in Bethlehem, the Diana Missionary Circle of St. Mark's UCC in Easton, and Grace United Methodist Church in Pen Argyl, where illustrated talks on Africa were presented.

Another large contribution was made by the sixth grade in the Wind Gap Elementary School which raised almost $100 by selling Barbie cheerleader outfits at Christmas time.

The student government at Pen Argyl Area High School contributed $300.

In other club business, Tina Nelson, president, announced the club had received an award from the CARE Committee in Philadelphia.

Conservationists to seek awards

STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Conservation District will compete for the top prizes in the 26th annual Goodyear Conservation Awards Program, according to Elmer Kreger, chairman of the district.

The district will pit its 1972 record of conservation achievements against other districts in the contest sponsored by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. in cooperation with the National Association of Conservation Districts (NACD).

An independent judging committee will select the first and second place districts in the state.

Each first place district wins expense paid, vacation study trips for its outstanding cooperator and a member of the governing board.

Representatives of 53 award-winning conservation districts nationwide will be guests of Goodyear on a tour of outstanding resource development projects.

The awards program also includes recognition of the outstanding cooperator who will be selected by the district from the 600 land-owners and land users who are enrolled in the Monroe County district program.

The Monroe County Soil and Water Conservation District has participated in the awards program for the past several years.

Members of the district governing board are Elmer Kreger, chairman; William Baumgartner, secretary-treasurer; Arlington Martin, county commissioner; member; Ralph Shupp, Donald Reish, Russell F. Scheller and Marvin Burrows, members.

Urban ecology discussed

MILFORD — Charles Holzbog showed a film "Town Centers" and discussed urban ecology with members of the Milford Tree Study Committee earlier this week.

Holzbog, TIRAC artist in residence, told the audience that in order to protect and preserve a community like Milford zoning is not enough. There is a need for designing, designing which provides open space even in shopping and major civic areas, space which affords the resident or visitor a change of pace.

After the showing of the film which depicted how he believed a number of landmarks in communities in the area could be preserved, Holzbog answered questions.

County Agent Joseph Staley, who chairs the Tree Study Group, explained some of the records that would be maintained on the town's trees after a survey is made by members of the Pinchot Chapter of the Society of the American Foresters.

Staley appealed to community organizations and individuals to help with the survey which is expected to be taken in June.

Power abuse action inevitable

The wise man never abuses his power, or even gives anyone else reason to charge that he has abused his power.

The reason is simple: When an abuse of power becomes evident, action is swift in attempting to curb that power.

You can see the theory being acted out in practice right now in the United States Senate. There, Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield is pushing a tough anti-war amendment to chop off Vietnam funds as of Aug. 31.

What Senate liberals see is an abuse of executive power. Although the apparent abuse began with ex-President Lyndon Johnson, President Richard Nixon has continued to pursue the Vietnam war through the device of Vietnamization, liberals charge.

Whether or not they are justified in the charge, the important thing right now is that they believe the President has abused his war-making powers. And Congress is jealous of its prerogatives, among them being the power to declare war.

Liberals feel that undeclared wars such as the Vietnam conflict subvert that power and transfer it to the executive branch. They are right up to a point. But there are times when swift action is necessary to defend national interests. And it seems clear that, unless the threat to national security is obvious, there would be sufficient debate on a war message to the Congress to cause costly delays in mounting a military effort.

But in the case of Vietnam, national security interests are not that clear. And, while Nixon's pullout program has steadily reduced the number of American soldiers to 69,000 in Vietnam, liberals still view the "undeclared war" attitude as a dodge to wrap yet more power around the executive branch of government — a power the framers of our Constitution went to great lengths to confine to the direct representatives of the people.

And so we have this desire to take tough action, to serve notice on the office of President that Congress hasn't abdicated its responsibility and power to make war. We just wonder why liberals waited so long to take such action, and why they tacitly gave that power away in the 1965 Gulf of Tonkin Resolution that allowed the Vietnam escalation in the first place.

Bloody enigma

A friend who went to a theater in a nearby city to see the movie "The Godfather" came away admitting the cruel violence of the picture but much more appalled by the fact that the most gruesome scenes brought applause from some of the young people in the audience.

This reaction and this preoccupation of the young with blood and violence in the movies as personified by "The Godfather" and "The Clockwork Orange" and "Straw Dog" is an enigma.

It is an enigma because this is the same generation which most strongly and publicly decries the cruelty and the bloodshed in Vietnam.

The Pennsylvania Story

Mason Denison

Lottery reviewed

HARRISBURG — Now that Pennsylvania's lottery is two months-plus old, it may be in order to pause and reflect on this unique enterprise.

Most state officials concerned with the small, green coupon seem pleased with its leap out of the starting gate.

Pennsylvanians, in general, apparently are satisfied since sales remain at a relatively high level.

All has not been sweetness and light, of course, as can be expected with any new venture, particularly one sanctioned by the State of such a large magnitude.

There have been some grumblings in legislative halls over alleged political favoritism in the licensing of sales agents (denied by the State Department of Revenue in whose confines the lottery operation is situated).

Then there was the squabble between Revenue Secretary Kane and fellow Shapp cabinet member, Frank C. Hilton, Secretary of the State Department of Property and Supplies. Hilton, very big in veterans' circles, was fearful that vet organizations which straddle this vast State would not be licensed to sell chances because of alleged discrimination.

'Brush-fire' This lottery "brush-fire" was quickly quelled at a breakfast meeting which included their boss, Governor Shapp.

Of recent, there has been some flak raised over the traveling "side show" which ballyhoos each weekly drawing what with all the colored squares, singing and scantily clad femmes dancing about the portable stage.

However, a little "razzle-dazzle" would seem to do no harm if it will help beat the drums on lottery sales via interest attached to the drawings. If the Legislature in its wisdom decreed a lottery in the first place, it would seem proper to go first class if this will help sales.

Interestingly, much of any sales lag may be attributed not to any necessary reluctance to fork over 50 cents — but, rather, to just plain forgetfulness to fork over the half-buck!

A common complaint heard on the morning of number-drawing day goes something like, "Hey, I forgot to buy a ticket this week!"

This problem is certainly not due to any lack of advertising since billboards, newspaper ads and bus-boards blare out the availability of the green ducats.

Perhaps, therefore, a new twist of a "Reminding" nature in the advertising may help lure the memory of those Pennsylvanians interested in taking a chance in the first place.

The licensed merchants, whose commissions increase with ticket sales, might do well to verbally encourage "spot" sales of the ticket as their customers enter the check-out lanes.

Line drawn

However, this column would like to see the line drawn at so-called "loss-leaders" whereby a free or discounted lottery ticket is offered as a lure to purchasing another product or purchase.

There is a growing tendency across the state for some commercial enterprises to offer tickets to solicit additional business via billboards and splashy newspaper ads.

To these larger businesses, it is worth absorbing the lottery ticket loss in order to stimulate sales of their regular products.

But is this fair to the tens of thousands of so-called "mom and pop" stores who can't afford the fancy advertising of offering lottery tickets as "loss leaders" or who can't afford to give the tickets away — period — with the purchase of other sales items?

To meet this problem, Representative Alvin Katz of Philadelphia and eight other legislators (from both parties) have introduced a bill forbidding the use of lottery tickets as loss-leaders.

There does not appear to be anything wrong with loss leaders, per se, since they are a time-honored, advertising device to get more customers into the store.

But it smacks of impropriety for the State government to permit the use of one of its responsibilities (lottery ticket sales) in the commercial arena if the "loss leader" device on the part of the few larger businesses would wind up taking business away from the thousands of smaller, struggling stores.

Alcoholism not anonymous

He was not an easy man to know. There were sensitive complexities under the good manners and he had a habit of bandaging his wounds in venomous letters to his friends. His name was William Wynne Wister. The face was handsome, the skin scrubbed, the hair red, the attitude antiseptic.

Bill Wister knew more about alcoholism than any man I've met. A long time ago, he was the subject of a forgotten book called "The Glass Crutch." In it, he showed rare courage. He allowed a writer to tell the whole story of how a fine family can spawn a drunkard. It was a fearless and shameless document, an advertisement to the world of all his mistakes.

He spent 10 months working on it with a writer and, five nights a week, he sat in a small apartment in Tudor City, New York, turning over the soil of his past. He was sober then. More than sober. He was a psychotherapist in alcoholism and the record showed that he managed to bring 294 patients of 300 out of the half life into something approaching adjustment. William Wynne Wister was in the unique position of having been an alcoholic and a doctor of alcoholics.

The opinions he had about drinking were narrow. The only cure, he felt, lay in psychiatry. He was opposed to Alcoholics Anonymous in spite of its wonderful record, and he would not admit that, in his conversations with patients, he was practicing the A.A. creed.

Wister had been drunk for 19 years, off and on. Mostly on. His parents had tried every sanitarium, every type of cure. One morning he woke up in a place where the nurse said gaily: "Mr. Wister, you have slept through four rounds of drinks." He opened one puffy eye and his cracked lips formed the words and he said: "Come again, please?" She smiled and pointed to a shelf in the room. "There they are. Four drinks. You get one an hour for 24 hours."

He couldn't believe it. But he was wrong. The doctors in the place believed that alcoholism could not be cured and so they pandered to the disease of the victim. They knew that the alcoholics, whose families were paying $150 a week, would not reveal the secret. It was the only place where alcoholics did not cry to go home.

I learned to admire this man. When I undertook to write the book, I knew nothing about alcoholism that one couldn't learn by getting plastered on Saturday night. Before he finished teaching me the writing side of runaway drinking, all the fun of sipping a rye and ginger ale was gone. It was impossible after that to take a drink without hearing Bill describe what it did to the body chemically, and what it did to the mind emotionally. After that, it was like Ramsey trying to write a poem to a girl.

One thing he told me did not get into the book. He maintained that a real alcoholic can spot another one at once. It sounded wrong. To prove the point, he told me that when he used to drink to the stage of nausea, he always did the same thing.

'Henry V' well fleshed out

Fortune Made His Sword, by Martha Rofheart. (Putman, $4.95).

"Harry born at Monmouth shall small time reign and gain much, but Harry born at Windsor shall rule long, but lose all" so, Martha Rofheart tells us, the blind seeress's prophecy ran.

Fortune Made His Sword is the story of "Harry born at Monmouth" — Henry V, the warrior-king who led 6,000 ragged, half-starved Englishmen to incredible victory over the massed chivalry of France at Agincourt.

Miss Rofheart, like most Americans, acquired her early knowledge of "Hank Cinq" largely from Shakespeare.

She has fleshed out the classic account most ably with research, producing a story which is fictional in form but substantially true to history.

The tale is told by several narrators, including Henry himself; Morgan, the Welsh girl he loved in his youth; Katharine, the French princess he married; and Hercules, court fool.

Appropriately, the story of Agincourt is told by a soldier — Sir John Page, who won his golden spurs on the field where Henry's tattered band overwhelmed a French force five times its size.

Fortune Made His Sword is a warm and interesting account. It leaves Henry VI — "Harry born at Windsor" — in the cradle, sparing the reader his long and doleful story.

Wall Street Disneyland

The Dinosaur Fund, by Verlan G. Varlan. (McGraw-Hill, $7.95).

The author, a financial writer, finds Wall Street a Disneyland of wonders and pleasures. Everything related to amassing tons of money through buying and selling stocks he finds fascinating.

His book is larded with insider stories and anecdotes designed to titillate the reader. Apparently here is supposed to lie the book's raison d'être — the revelation of the nuts and bolts operation of a mutual fund.

We have Denver Milliken, a 29-year-old Wall Street whiz kid and head of a wildly successful mutual fund (the Dinosaur Fund). He gets involved in a performance race with his boss, Choate Cavendish (who increasingly looks like a dinosaur as the book progresses). This serves as the book's central power struggle.

If selling short is your thing — in fact, if you understand what it means — you might buy this book.

Mystery novel disappointing

11 Harrowhouse, by Gerald A. Browne. (Arbor House, $6.95).

The movie rights to this novel were bought by a major Hollywood studio before publication. Better wait to see the film.

Seemingly endless and frequently trivial dialogue occupies about two-thirds of the book.

The plot is ingenious but only sporadically interesting until the real action begins, approximately on page 180.

The title is the London address of a world diamond monopoly which manipulates supply and demand to keep gems scarce and prices high.

An American dealer and his Swedish mistress plot with an eccentric English millionaire to steal the monopoly's four-ton $12 billion inventory. The heist succeeds but the winners become losers, in a surprise ending that was the final disappointment for this reader.

By MARIAN C. SCOTT, wife of Minority Leader of the U.S. Senate

(Last of three articles)

(Written exclusively for Roscoe Drummond on the basis of Mrs. Hugh Scott's recent trip to the People's Republic of China.)

PEKING — The astronauts journeyed to the moon and discovered a strange and unfamiliar land. We, too, have been on a voyage of discovery to the People's Republic of China.

It is a beautiful land with friendly people. We entered this other world as we drove down a long, wide, tree-lined avenue from the airport in Peking. Fruit trees blossomed behind the white poplars bedecked in new spring green. Behind the fruit trees were wheat fields and truck gardens. Silhouetted against the dark mountains beside the fields, were figures clad in grays and blues and moving slowly across the tan-colored earth.

There was not a single car, only a few trucks and many bicycles, all moving in a slow and stately trim. I was struck with how quiet it was and how much like a Chinese scroll it all looked.

We had been met by 10 officials and interpreters who were to travel with us in an English Viscount plane to all six cities we visited. There were 22 of us altogether in a fleet of cars. Two big black limousines, "Red Flags," Chinamade, were reserved for the two senators and their wives — a fleet of smaller cars for the others. We always traveled in this caravan whenever we were on land. People fell off bicycles; people along the streets stood agape at the strange round eyed humans, the likes of which most of them had never seen before.

'Good morning'

We would call out "Ni hao" ("Good morning," or "How are you?") and wave and smile and the sidewalk gapers would clap their hands and wave and smile back. Many of the people did not know we were Americans. Some, we were told, did.

At every place we stopped the same procedure took place. We were led into a large room with upholstered chairs, always the same kind, with antimacassars on the backs and arms, set in a hollow square. The officials of that particular place sat on a sofa in the middle with a senator on each side with wives next to their husbands and the interpreter alongside. I learned to go to my place like a homing pigeon. We were always served tea and towels first thing and cigarettes were set before us all. They make 20 different kinds and the men smoke like crazy.

However, I only saw one woman smoking. She rode with us one day and was head of a women's construction unit. She said that 40 per cent of all the construction work in the People's Republic of China is done by women.

After our "briefing" and more tea and towels, we would proceed to another large room which was always set the same way — round tables seating 8 or 10 with green ferns encircled by oranges as centerpieces.

Ten dishes

Eight or 10 dishes were placed around the

Guest houses

We had been housed in luxurious guest houses everywhere. The Chinese do not use these. They are kept for their foreign guests. Most of these guest houses would accommodate 100 people or more and we were generally the only people in them. They were fully staffed with girls running to us with tea and towels the minute we appeared.

The people themselves live very austere, the philosophy of Mao being that everyone should have the same. Their dress, their little homes or apartments without electricity or bathrooms reflect this austerity.

On my dressing table I found 16 items of toiletries and in the big tiled bathroom, with loads of hot water, were 13 more! Just outside our compound women were carrying water from a tap on yokes suspended over their shoulders. However, we were all impressed with what has been accomplished in 20 years.

Bomb plot foursome guilty

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Four Lehigh Valley men were found guilty in federal court Thursday of conspiring to blow up Bethlehem Steel facilities and rail and power lines serving the Allentown-Bethlehem-Easton area.

Convicted were David Heckman, 21, Bethlehem; John Vito, 51, Allentown; and James Heiney, 22, and Robert Rundle, 34, both of Easton. Sentencing was deferred by U.S. District Court pending a pre-sentence report. Maximum sentences would be five years in prison and/or $10,000 fine for each.

Defense counsel said it plans to appeal the verdict, reached by the jury of seven women and five men after almost three hours deliberation over two days.

Bail for the four was continued at $15,000.

The government's key witness, Donald P. Murphy Sr., 39, testified he worked as an informant and helped undercover federal agents squelch the plot by persuading the defendants to turn over dynamite for "bigger plans."

The defense rested its case Wednesday after calling several witnesses in hopes of discrediting Murphy's testimony. Their testimony indicated Murphy had organized a community help organization as a front for "terrorist activities" and had attempted to sell several youths "hot cars."

Charged with wiretapping

Philadelphia reporter arrested

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The district attorney's office Thursday issued an arrest warrant for a Philadelphia Bulletin reporter charged with illegal wiretapping while working on a story.

The warrant charged that Greg Walter, who previously worked for both Life Magazine and Philadelphia Magazine, used a portable tape recorder earlier this spring to record telephone conversations he had with four persons allegedly involved in a bribery case.

Separate investigations by the district attorney's office and Police Department indicated the six conversations with two former city policemen now working as Pennsylvania Crime Commission investigators, a detective sergeant and a woman involved in the case related to the bribery arrest of a Barbara Dunagan.

Miss Dunagan was arrested March 22 and charged with allegedly attempting to bribe a vice squad investigators with $200. She reportedly told investigators she was working for Walter and the Crime Commission.

Two of the four persons who spoke with Walter told the district attorney's office and police that they were not aware their conversations were being recorded and had not given consent that they be divulged.

The Bulletin called the warrant an "extremely serious matter," which requires "clarification." Stating that it "prohibits reporters from tape recording any phone conversations without the expressed consent of the parties involved," the newspaper said Walter will remain in their employment and "is presumed innocent."

Walter had been working on a story involving alleged police corruption in the city. He left Philadelphia Magazine early in the year after a profile he did on former police commissioner and Mayor Frank L. Rizzo was not published.

Irate Michener quits symposium

MOSCOW (UPI) — Pulitzer prize-winning author James A. Michener marched out of a symposium at the Summit Fross Center Thursday in protest of what he denounced as a frivolous discussion of treatment of Jews in the Soviet Union.

"You are making a joke out of a serious problem," he shouted as he walked out. "I won't stand for it."

Michener, author of "The Source," an extensive account of the origins of Judaism, left after an argument between James Wish, a correspondent of American Jewish Press Association, and Alexander Chakovsky, a Jew and editor of the influential Soviet weekly magazine, "Literary Gazette."

Wish had asked why the Soviet Union had no Jewish publications, saying they were needed by Soviet Jews who want to know what is happening in the world Jewish community. "There is no world Jewish community," replied Chakovsky.

Then, Chakovsky — implying that no such evils existed in his country — spoke of alleged desecration of Jewish synagogues and cemeteries in the United States and discrimination of Jews in universities.

Chakovsky also quoted from a Soviet satirical classic, "The Golden Calf," published in the early 1930s. The passage included a dialogue between a Jewish American reporter and a Soviet journalist.

Narcotics ring kingpin jailed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Louis Cirillo, kingpin of a "French Connection" narcotics ring who kept a $1 million cash reserve fund buried in his backyard, was sentenced Thursday to 25 years in prison for dealing in heroin.

Federal Judge Edward Weinfeld also ordered Cirillo, 48, a Bronx bagel maker and one of 23 persons authorities said belonged to the ring, placed on 10 years probation after his 25-year sentence.

want to know how far back they want to return," he testified. "The reason for much of that attitude is that two-thirds of us in America are so young we never had the experience of biting into a wormy apple, looking at the worm hole and wondering, 'Is it in there yet, or did I get him?' We think the God of nature made a nice, red, plump appetizing apple."

"God puts the worm in the apple, and man takes it out. Two-thirds are so young that we do not appreciate it. He puts the termite in the timber and parasite in the pig and man takes them out. The problem of agriculture is to convince the two-thirds of us who are under 30 that we get a nice, plump juicy apple only because we disturb the ecology of nature."

"I am for improving the environment and restoring it," Whitten said, "but we have a lot of environmentalists today who are opposed to changing the environment even for the better."

"I know of some who want to push it back," Butz commented.

Butz feels nature balance must be upset for survival

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, in congressional testimony released Thursday, said many persons, especially young environmentalists, do not realize that Americans must upset the balance of nature in order to survive.

"Survival is the name of the game," said Butz in testimony before a House subcommittee. "If we had not upset the balance of nature we could not have 200 million Americans living in the continental United States."

Butz criticized not only "emotional" ecologists but back-to-nature advocates whom he said believe erroneously that fertilizer and pesticides produce unhealthy food.

"Before we go back to organic agriculture we will have to decide which 50 million Americans will starve," Butz told an appropriations subcommittee headed by Rep. Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss.

Butz said farmers, despite continue research on alternatives, must continue to use substantial amounts of chemicals if Americans are to PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — "Philadelphia is where it all began," Mayor Frank L. Rizzo said Thursday after it all ended for his city's bid to be focal point of the nation's 200th birthday celebration in 1976.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

To all intents and purposes the year is over. For local clubs and organizations anyway. Officers have been elected and installed. Final banquet held. Auditors appointed. Money spent. Reports filed.

lawn festivals, but generally the pressure is off, it's more important whether Monday is fair than if it's the first or third Monday, and nobody is racing the hands of the clock to the next meeting.

All of this requires a certain amount of adjustment, and it's just as well that we're starting off with a holiday which requires no great amount of preparation, involves picnics rather than formal dinners.

There's also been a trend of late for local people to stay home rather than embark on long trips so it all sounds sort of peaceful. Except for the three outdoor weddings I've heard about where everybody will be up early looking at the sky. For them and for all of us, keep your fingers crossed for good weather.

The Monroe County Garden Club continues with picnics and trips. Fire Company Auxiliaries get involved in carnivals. Sunday schools have picnics and churches have Calling all calorie-counting, cholesterol-cautious sausage-lovers! Did you know that you can turn lean hamburger into scrumptious sausage patties that seem fat with flavor? No sausage stuffers or other meat market machinery needed; all it takes is some seasoning and your own two talented hands. You've got the magic touch that zaps away calories!

I've been collecting ways to make "skinny sausage" ever since that fateful day I learned that ordinary pork sausage, bulk or link, weighs in at a large 2,200 calories a pound. (Your Slim Gourmet beef sausage, on the other hand, is 750 calories or less!) What's missing mainly is the fat. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, raw pork sausage is more than half fat — but don't kid yourself into thinking that cooked sausage is half as fattening. According to the USDA, cooked sausage is still about 40 per cent fat. Slim Gourmet beef sausage, on the other hand, is only about seven per cent fat, which makes it "heart-smart," too.

Slim Gourmet Sausage is good news all around. After all, how can you have sausage and pancakes, sausage pizza, sausage stuffing, or baked sausage and apples without sausage?

Slim Gourmet COUNTRY-STYLE BEEF SAUSAGE
2 pounds beef chuck
1 teaspoon thyme or sage, or mixed poultry seasonings
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon black pepper
Dash of smoke seasoning (optional)

Have the beef chuck trimmed of all separable fat and ground to order. If possible, have it ground fine or double-ground; however, this isn't absolutely necessary.

Who's afraid of NRA?

Dow Jones — Ottaway News
The National Rifle Association tends in its public statements to minimize its influence as a lobbying force on Congress — but many politicians tread very lightly when it comes to issues close to the NRA's heart.

Several Senate liberals from western states where the NRA has concentrations of membership refuse.

Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, the Senate Minority Leader, has publicly expressed regret for his support of the federal Gun Control Act of 1968, and he even set up a "Hugh Scott Championship Trophy" for Pennsylvania target shooters to make amends.

Former Attorney General John Mitchell, after stating in a television interview that nobody "needs" guns but law enforcement officers, later reassured the NRA's magazine, The American Rifleman, through an aide, that he "stood up to Teddy Kennedy only recently on the gun-control issue."

Decanters becoming popular

Avon collectors calling!

By EDWARD P. FOLDESSY
Dow Jones-Ottaway News
MILLVILLE, N.J. — A tight security net has enshrouded the Wheaton Glass Co. plant here since the big heist last summer.

"We aren't sure whether it was an inside job or not, but we're strongly inclined to believe it was engineered within," a Wheaton spokesman gravely asserts.

Local police have already made two arrests (outsides), but they're still searching for the "brains" behind the caper — which netted hundreds, possibly thousands, of empty avon bath-oil bottles.

Empty Avon bottles? The "Ding-Dong, Avon-Calling" variety? That's right. And the thieves knew exactly what they wanted. For collecting Avon bottles is the latest craze, and there's a big demand for any and all kinds of the cosmetics containers.

There are at least 100,000 collectors of Avon bottles in the U.S. today," estimates Bud Hastin, president of the National Avon Club in Kansas City, Mo. "There were probably fewer than 2,000 to 3,000 five years ago."

More than 50 Avon collectors' clubs have sprouted up across the nation in the past four years. And they've just formed their own "industry" group, the National Association of Avon Clubs.

All this has meant soaring prices for Avon bottles. In the past year, "they've risen 20 per cent to 25 per cent on the average," says Hastin, who also publishes an encyclopedia on Avon bottles. (He sold 40,000 last year at $8.95 each).

The interest comes because Avon packages many of its products in fancy decanters — from Grecian pitchers to bucking broncos and dueling pistols.

Some of the more recent entries include a replica of Washington's Capitol complete with its golden dome, which doubles as a cap. Another is an Elizabethan figurine; her floorlength skirt contains cologne, her upper torso conceals a bottle cap.

Still another is a miniature western saddle slung over a plastic fence.

Collectors generally say they started saving Avon bottles simply for decorative purposes, but soon they found themselves searching for even plain cold-cream jars.

"After they have one or two on their shelves, they're hooked, and it just gets worse," explains James S. Clark, president of the Mid-America Avon Collectors Club.

That's what happened to Clark, who has become so intrigued with Avon bottles that he has all but forgotten his previous hobby: collecting Playboy magazines and bunny memorabilia.

The hobby can be costly. One relatively plain but popular decanter, the Alpine flask, currently is bringing about $50 in collector circles.

When introduced by Avon in 1966, it retailed for $4 (and that included eight ounces of aftershave lotion).

"Avon Products, based in New York, is flattered by all the attention, but it has mixed emotions."

"We're in the cosmetics business, not the bottle business," spokesman emphasizes.

Although it designs its own decanters and other containers, production is farmed out to suppliers like Wheaton Glass.

Furthermore, the company doesn't believe that the collectors' craze is having much impact on its own sales.

Better than Barefoot.

Bidding quiz

You are South, both sides vulnerable. The bidding has been:

East South West North
1 ♠ 2 ♠ 3 ♠ 4 ♠
Pass ?

What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠A92 ♥Q95 ♦74 ♠AKJ6
2. ♠AQ8 ♥AQ76 ♦AQ ♠KJ82
3. ♠AQ73 ♥AQ52 ♦6 ♠AQ94
4. ♠A64 ♥AQJ ♦10 ♠KQJ873

1. Two spades. Partner may have no values at all and the most you can do is offer a single raise, indicating spade support and moderate values in excess of a minimum double. North can't have a really good hand, for he would have responded two spades in that case.

He may of course have 6 or 7 points, or he may have only 1 or 2. It is unnecessary to guess what he has; all you do is tell North what you have and let him decide what to do next.

2. One notrump. The choice lies between a notrump and two clubs. The notrump bid is slightly better because it is more apt to induce a further bid from North. He might very well pass two clubs on a hand where he would consider an eleven-trick game too remote to be pursued, yet act over a notrump because he considered a nine-trick game within the realm of possibility.

Note that two notrump would be excessively exuberant. It would show the values for an opening two notrump bid — which you obviously don't have.

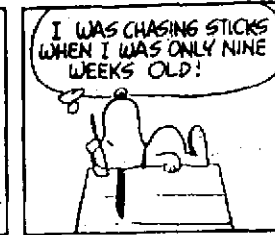

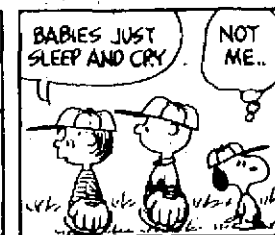

3. Three spades. While North's response is forced, it is still possible for him to have the few ingredients necessary for ten tricks. Thus, he may have:

♠J8652 ♥K763 ♦83 ♠85
or ♠K854 ♥96 ♦82 ♠J7632

and with either or them he should happily bid four.

4. Two clubs. It may seem cowardly to bid only two clubs, but the fact is that game is unlikely unless partner voluntarily bids again.

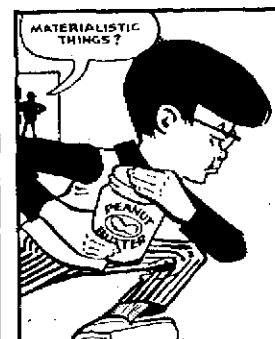

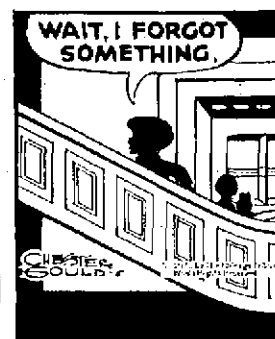

The alternative bids are two spades or three clubs, but neither of them can be heartily recommended. It would be dangerous to raise spades with only three-card support, for North may easily have only four trumps. And it would be equally dangerous to leap to three clubs, for most players treat such a jump as forcing and this hand is simply not good enough to compel North to bid again with no value.

S-burg's work experience program still going strong

STROUDSBURG — For the 17th year, the Stroudsburg Area High School Industrial Arts department has instituted its highly successful work-experience program.

Stroudsburg was for many years the only school in the immediate area pursuing such a program. The school year 1971-72 has shown the work-experience program to be the best since it was instituted in 1956 by Robert Hawk.

Administration, guidance, and the industrial arts department attempt to bridge the gap between school and employment as effectively and smoothly as possible for the industrial arts student.

The transition must be gradual, organized, and supervised so that no great problem of adjustment exists.

The program is begun in the second semester of the senior year.

Industry and the school have worked closely together on the program and the end results have always been satisfying.

Stroudsburg High has eight boys on work experience for the 1971-72 school year. Students engaged in the program are: Andrew Evans, Beaufab Mills; Glenn Altemose, Saylorburg Trailer Sales; David Smith, Dietrich Chevrolet, Bangor; Donald Schiebel, Trumatic Machine and Tool Company. Also, David Koczot, IGA Donald Schiebel takes inventory at Trumatic Machine Co.

Markets: Tim Bak, Sun Litho-Print; Ronald Buskirk, Pocono Foundry and Machine Shop; and Gary Remnsnyder, Ehrlich's Market.

Benefits to the students in the program are varied. Academic work becomes more meaningful to a student when an opportunity to apply it exists; the value of sound technical training and an understanding of the duties of personnel in a chosen field become evident; interests and aptitudes are tested under realistic conditions and situations before a student becomes too involved in a special field; responsibilities help him mature more rapidly; cooperation with supervisors and fellow workers becomes an asset; a student learns a greater appreciation of the value of higher education by observing co-workers whose advancement was gained through higher education and technical training; and, financial assistance is a very immediate benefit.

STROUDSBURG — Monroe County residents purchased United States Savings Bonds, Series E and H, amounting to $205,298 during March, according to new statistics released by Charles S. Krumrine, state chairman of the Bond Division of the Department of the Treasury.

The figure brings the county's 1972 U.S. Savings Bond purchases to $862,778, 30.2 per cent of its $2,821,000 quota for the entire year. Robert F. Davenport is the county chairman.

In Pike County, where Donald Z. Wade is the local chairman, U.S. Savings Bond purchases totaled $9,437 for March, bringing the 1972 total to date of $55,031. This represents 27.4 of Pike County's $201,000 1972 quota.

385 receive degrees during ESSC ceremonies

A full house at ESSC graduation.

EAST STROUDSBURG — Francis B. McGarry, vice president and dean of academic affairs, told 385 East Stroudsburg State College spring graduates Thursday evening that the college experience should enforce in each the ability to fashion his own life.

"College should have taught us something about our problem solving abilities. It should have helped us change from what we were to what we could be or what we ought to be," McGarry stated before a jammed to capacity commencement crowd.

Likening life to "making one's way through a dark spot," he contended, "We move to a spot which promises to be better but it is our choice which determines the moves that will eventually take us out of the dark."

An ESSC faculty member for 36 years and present at some 106 of its commencement ceremonies, McGarry's address marked one of his last official acts before his retirement.

"It's almost 43 years since I was supposed to participate in a commencement here. I didn't participate and I've been waiting 43 years to get

Consumer agency warns of illegal charter flights

STROUDSBURG — In recent years, thousands of passengers booked on unlawful charter flights have found themselves stranded in foreign countries or had vacation plans disrupted, according to the details of a report recently received by the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce.

The report was prepared by the Trade Practices Department of the national Council of Better Business Bureaus (CBBB), of which the local chamber is a member.

It states these illegal flights were booked through "unscrupulous charter organizers" and reveals the Civil Aeronautics Board does not maintain a list of charter flights and only has knowledge of a very small percentage of all charter organizations and flights.

However, the CBBB lists general provisions common to air charters to enable individuals to determine the organization's validity.

Simply, a charter is an arrangement by which the capacity of an aircraft is engaged by either one individual or a group which he represents.

Where there is more than one group on an aircraft, each must contract for a minimum of 40 seats, according to the CBBB. Also, a charter may not be held open to the general public but must be limited to a specific group.

The national consumer agency warns only "bona fide" members of the charter members of the chartering organization for at least six months prior to the flight date — and their immediate families may fly as passengers on a charter flight.

The report notes a travel agent is not permitted to charter an aircraft, sponsor a charter or sign a charter contract for the chartering organization, although he can assist in the administration of a charter operation.

The only exceptions listed are cases of "inclusive tour charters" and study group charters.

Look for signs

The CBBB cautions travelers to look for the following signs of an illegal charter: Enrollment of members into a "phantom" organization, skirting the six-month requirement by backdating membership, failure to identify the airline, and solicitation of the charter flight by mail or advertising to people who are not members of the organization.

The CBBB further lists the hazards of booking a passage on an illegal charter. Aside from the possibility of being stranded in a foreign country, an individual may find himself paying a fee for a non-existent flight.

Also, should the Civil Aeronautics Board of the airline learn of the charter's illegality, the flight could be grounded even as the passengers are boarding the plane.

To protect himself, the traveler is urged to insure the charter is a legitimate one. Should any doubts exist, fees should not be paid until a complete investigation is carried out.

The CBBB suggests travelers call the airline involved to confirm the charter flight's authenticity or contact the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington, D.C., concerning questions about charter regulations.

The report reveals the board is tightening enforcement regulations and applying stricter surveillance. In addition, it supported an action by the American Society of Travel Agents last June which led to a federal court injunction stopping 23 illegal charter flights to Europe.

Seventh county CD head quits since unit's inception

STROUDSBURG — Civil Defense in Monroe County was decapitated for the seventh time Thursday when acting director Mrs. Catherine Miller tendered her resignation for "personal reasons."

Mrs. Miller has been with the county's civil defense operation almost since its inception in 1950. During the 20 years she has served as administrative assistant to the director, Mrs. Miller has been plugged into the directorship five times.

During the years since 1950, Monroe County has had six different directors, serving for terms of various lengths and compensation of various amounts — including volunteer time.

The last official director, Ernest Klingel, resigned earlier this year claiming he would not put in the time required to shape up the county civil defense operation. At the time of his resignation, the job paid $36.75 per week.

The Monroe County Commissioners, who oversee the post, tried to interest an employee of the Assessor's Office in the job when it was determined the employee's job had been automated.

When the employee turned down the offer for health reasons, the commissioners appointed Mrs. Miller to her fifth turn as acting director.

Before leaving office, Klingel had expressed displeasure with the response civil defense meets among townships and municipalities in the county.

The job is outlined in a three-page description held by the Monroe County Commissioners.

Past directors have had difficulty explaining what the job entails. One has claimed the job is pretty much designed by what the county officials dictate and state requirements.

Asked if she would evaluate the status of Monroe County's Civil Defense and the history of the office of director over the 20 years she has been there, Mrs. Miller declined to comment.

Monroe County jurors hand in 16 indictments

STROUDSBURG — A Monroe County Grand Jury Thursday returned 16 true bills and dismissed one charge as indictments for the June term of Monroe County criminal court were handed down.

Eight of the indictments were on the charge of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor or drugs. The following persons were indicted on that charge:

Joseph Albite, East Stroudsburg; Joseph Dehaven, Brodheadsville; John Johnson, Pen Argyl; Kurt Kreiger, Greentown; Joseph Srebro, Tobyhanna; Robert Ford, Schenectady, N.Y.; William Reese, Cresco; and Marshall Neipert, East Stroudsburg.

Also indicted were Horace Praetorius, Stroudsburg R.D. 5, charged with corrupting the morals of children; David Fine, of Stroudsburg, and Bernadine Torres, of New York, N.Y., both on charges of burglary, larceny and receiving stolen goods.

James Gilroy, Stroudsburg, was indicted for driving a motor vehicle while under suspension.

For larceny by an employee Wayne Bruch, of Bethlehem, was indicted for receiving stolen goods Brian Dexter, of Stroudsburg, was also indicted.

Maureen and William Markowitz, of Canadensis, were indicted for possession of narcotic drugs. George Clause, of Thornhurst, was indicted for obstructing an officer in the execution of process.

The grand jury rejected a charge of larceny against Ronald Tuzar, of Chicago, Ill.

Demos elect youngster

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Harvey Thiemann, 28, was elected chairman of the Democratic State Committee Thursday night — the youngest person ever to hold that job in the nation.

Thiemann, a protégé of Gov. Milton J. Shapp defeated Pittsburgh attorney Daniel Berger by an overwhelming vote of 172-26. He promised the party organization and the governor's office would work together.

Thiemann had been waiting for a chance at the job since last year when Shapp tried to oust the previous chairman, John N. Scales.

Berger, a former campaigner for Shapp, split with the governor, accusing him of turning against his promise for an "open party."

Scales, a candidate for the state Senate, and district attorney of Westmoreland County, did not seek re-election.

But before Scales stepped down, he divulged the results of an audit of party books that he said vindicated him of wrongdoing.

"There is absolutely not the slightest question of any misappropriations of these funds," Scales said. But the audit report did not include the party's outstanding debts.

Office closing

EASTON — Edward F. Sullivan, district manager of the Easton Social Security Administration office, announced the office will be closed Monday, May 29 in observance of Memorial Day.

MHMR receives $8,988

HARRISBURG — An $8,988 payment has been approved to reimburse the Carbon-Monroe-Pike Mental Health-Mental Retardation unit for operating social service programs in the tri-county area.

The local payment is a chunk of the $2,138,817 worth of all-federal funds which have received state Department of Public Welfare approval for reimbursement to counties or multi-county administrative units for second quarter (January-March 1972) claims.

The $8,988 payment includes $336 in an amended claim from the October-December, 1971 period.

It breaks down to $5,458 for rehabilitation and $3,529 for information and referral services.

Under federal-state arrangement, county mental health and mental retardation units may now claim 75 per cent federal reimbursement for emergency services, rehabilitation and training services and information and referral services.

These services had previously been financed through 90 per cent state funding and 10 per cent funding at the county level.

"The federal reimbursement for social services to low-income people in county mental health and mental retardation programs gives the department an opportunity to intermix previously isolated programs and avoid duplicate service delivery systems," state Welfare Secretary Helene Wohlgemuth said, as the payments were announced.

New portion of I-84 now open to traffic

MILFORD — A 20-mile portion of Interstate 84 from Milford to Blooming Grove, Pike County, was opened to traffic Thursday morning by the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation (PennDOT).

Built at a cost of $24 million, the new stretch is one more link in the expressway that will connect Northeastern Pennsylvania to the New England states.

Harold C. Poulson, a PennDOT deputy chief engineer, cut the ribbon marking the official opening of the four-lane divided highway. Also present for the brief ceremony were Donald A. Howe, mayor of Milford, and Joseph Riccardi, mayor of Matamoras.

The new portion will be opened to all traffic from the Rte. 6 Milford interchange to the Rte. 402 interchange, east of Blooming Grove.

Only passenger cars will be allowed to use the remaining five-mile section from the Rte. 402 interchange to the Rte. 390 interchange, west of Blooming Grove. The restriction on trucks is being placed because Rte. 390 is unsuitable for truck traffic.

The opening of this new link brings the total of I-84 mileage available to travel to 28 miles in Pennsylvania. When complete, this $80 million highway will stretch 51 miles from Matamoras on the Delaware River bordering New York to Scranton. Previously, eight miles had been in use from Matamoras to Milford.

The next section to be opened is 11 miles in length extending to Rte. 191 near Sterling. This $7.25 million section is presently under construction. Its opening is anticipated by the fall of next year.

Interstate 84 is presently complete from Blooming Grove, Pa., to Hartford, Conn. The entire highway is scheduled to be finished by 1975, assuming the necessary land can be acquired.

Following the ribbon-cutting ceremonies Thursday, officials of the Interstate 84 Association of New York, the Lake Wallenpaupack Assn., and the Hawley-Lake Wallenpaupack Chamber of Commerce joined highway and local government officials in a motorcade along the new highway.

The motorcade was followed by a luncheon in Milford.

The design and construction of this new section of highway was supervised by PennDOT's District Engineer Thomas J. Harrington. Engineering consultants were Michael Baker, Inc.; Yule, Jordan and McNeely; and Capitol Engineers.

Grading, bridge construction and drainage work was done by Central Pennsylvania Quarry, Stripping and Construction Co.; James D. Morrissey, Inc.; Kaminski Brothers; and Gasparini Excavating and Construction Co.

Paving work was done by Denton Construction Co. and James D. Morrissey, Inc.

'Cowboys' upset PV school board

BRODHEADSVILLE — Complaints of "cowboys" traveling at high rates of speed between the Chestnut Hill Elementary School and Pleasant Valley High prompted the Pleasant Valley School Board to check the possibility of installing "speed breakers."

The device is an elevated bump in the roadway. Two would be installed.

"They might go over them once and not know they're there," said director Jerome Blakeslee, "but they sure won't again."

Leon Barlieb, business manager, was authorized to investigate manufacturing firms making the device. John Mills, superintendent, urged the action.

In another matter, the board refused to pay a 16-year-old Social Security bill for $740.42 recently uncovered by government officials.

The bill dates to the days when Pleasant Valley was a "jointure." Lester Brown, solicitor, said he'd provide an opinion on whether to pay within a few days.

"Why a few days?" shot back director Maynard Sterner. "Why not wait 16 years?"

The board appointed Arthur Smith as administrative assistant and athletic director. Smith is currently assistant principal and driver training teacher.

Department chairmen were named, with Donald Rinker, English; Mrs. Mary Moran, mathematics; Lee Costenbader, science; Otto Mills, social studies; Steve Kun, physical education; Mrs. Jeanette Mitchell, home economics; Robert Catina, business education; Michale Rissmiller, industrial arts; Richard Shoopack, foreign language, and Floyd Frisbie, music.

Two elementary teachers were hired: Miss Dora Borger and Mrs. Jill Allen.

The Lehigh Valley Coal Sales Co. was awarded a coal contract at $19.97 per ton.

Lester Brown was reappointed board solicitor at $1,700, with Gordon and Gordon named as certified public accountants for regular taxes at $1,300 and $325 for earned income taxes.

Monroe Security Bank and Trust Co. was picked as the district depository and Irene Hawk as earned income tax collector for Eldred Township.

Officials of the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation, local government officials and members of local organizations form a motorcade Thursday as the first cars travel

'Quiet before storm' sets in over Indy

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) —The Speedway's auto-racing fraternity spent Thursday mapping strategy or remapping their engines for Saturday's 500-mile race for a $1 million jackpot. It appeared the weather could knock strategy and engines for a loop.

For the 33 starting cars, it was a time for final inspection and cleaning—many of them lay down in Gasoline Alley while crews worked them as close to perfection as possible.

For the 33 starting drivers, it was the "quiet before the storm"—some of them helped reassemble the machines while others were not even at the Speedway.

There will be no running on the 2 1/2-mile oval until the flying start of this 56th annual gasoline derby at noon EDT Saturday, the first full day of the Memorial Day holiday weekend.

Some drivers said flatly there was no strategy to be employed this year because of the torrid speeds achieved in practice and three days of qualifications.

Others indicated strategy will develop once the 200-lap chase is under way. For the first time, four pit stops are mandatory, one more than last year and officials of the sanctioning United States Auto Club said it was an added safety feature.

In addition, a new system of signal lights will be employed for the first time—also as a safety measure and to protect the front runner's lead over the rest of the field.

In the past, whenever the yellow caution light flashed on, signalling either an accident or another type of obstruction on the race course, the field was slowed down to approximately 120 to 140 miles per hour and bunched behind the leader.

The new system is supposed to protect the leader's margin by controlling speeds of the cars. Eight electrically controlled yellow light panels will tell each driver whether or not he is within the speed assigned him during the yellow light period.

A weather forecast of generally sunny skies with temperatures in the 80s was expected to take its toll of men and machines—especially the latter in view of the fact a rash of engine failure plagued many crews since the track was opened late in April.

Because of the tremendous strain on the engines, either four cylinder turbocharged Offenhausers or eight cylinder turbocharged Fords, many drivers and owners felt it would be a wide-open chase for the lion's share of the big jackpot.

Pole sitter Bobby Unser, Albuquerque,

N.M., said he liked the idea of four pit stops and hoped to get in and out of the pits in less than 20 seconds. The rules provide that a car must take on fuel during a pit stop, but tire changing is optional. Barring major accidents or a very hot track surface, which could be harder on the rubber, most drivers felt they could go the distance without tire changes.

Last year was the first time in several years that the winner, Al Unser, Bobby's younger brother, made a tire change. The traditional drivers meeting today presided over by Chief Steward Harlan Fonger, was the final official pre-race activity for the drivers, owners and crews.

MOUNT POCONO — Bud Tingelstad, Indianapolis; Dick Simon of Salt Lake City and Jimmy Caruthers of Anaheim, Calif., all veterans of the 1971 Schaefer 500, and John Martin, a rookie from Long Beach, Calif., were among six entries announced Friday for the July 2nd "Schaefer 500".

Both Martin and Simon have two cars each and Caruthers and Tingelstad were listed on single entries. Simon, owner and driver of the Travel Lodge Sleeper specials, which are both Lola chassis powered by turbocharged Ford engines, will be making his third appearance in the "Indianapolis 500" Saturday and appeared in all three "Triple Crown" races in 1971.

Martin, who will be making his first appearance at Indianapolis, passed his driver's test at Indianapolis in 1971 but was unable to make the starting field in any of the Triple Crown races in 1971.

Martin joins Larry Dickson, Mel Kenyon, Lee Kunzman, Rick Muther, Steve Savage and Al Loquasto as eligible rookies for the first annual presentation of the Mario Andretti Rookie of the Year Award, being presented by the Junior Chamber of Commerce of nearby Nazareth, which will make the presentation in honor of their favorite son.

Martin's entries are both powered by turbocharged Offenhauser engines, one mounted in a Brabham chassis and the other in a Gilbert chassis. Both of Martin's cars are the

Frazier keeps title with TKO in fourth

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI)—Smokin' Joe Frazier punctured the impossible dream of back alley fighter Ron Stander Thursday night bloodying him unmercifully and finally stopping him on a technical knockout at the start of the fifth round of their scheduled 15 round heavyweight championship fight.

Doctor Jack Lewis of the Nebraska State Boxing Association rushed to Stander's corner at the conclusion of the fourth round after being summoned by referee Zack Clayton and signified the game, bloodied challenger could not continue.

Stander, tough as nails, wept when Clayton signified the fight was over.

Frazier, a 10-1 favorite who had said there was always that chance he might get "clipped," wasted no time asserting his obvious superiority over the stocky, long-sideburned challenger from Council Bluffs, Iowa, just across the bridge from here.

He drew blood from Stander's nose with two tremendous left hooks near the end of the first round. Frazier knew he had taken command and when the bell sounded ending the round he came back to his corner trotting and smiling.

Then in the third round an explosive right to the side of Stander's head took almost everything out of the shaggy haired challenger and he appeared helpless at the end of the session.

He wouldn't quit though. Breathing hard and with the blood streaming down his face, he waved for Frazier to come on in the fourth. The champ did and split the challenger's forehead with a short right.

All Stander's reflexes seemed to leave him at once but he never quit trying and he never went down.

Dick Noland, Stander's manager, said before the bout, "If we could put this fight on in a dark alley I know who would be walking out."

Noland also had said if Clayton, "doesn't get excited about looking at a little blood, we're going to win a 15 round decision. We've always been able to stop the blood if given a chance."

Not this time though as Frazier registered his 29th straight victory in as many professional bouts.

Most Americans optimistic on summit

By LOUIS HARRIS

Although most Americans are well aware of Soylet-U.S. tensions over Vietnam and the Middle East, nonetheless by 52-to-38 per cent a majority believe "it is possible for the United States and Russia to come to long-term agreements which will work."

However, when asked just before the current summit meetings in Moscow what might come of them, only six per cent expected "major agreements," 51 per cent "minor agreements," and 31 per cent "none at all."

President Nixon's trip to Moscow receives a solid four-to-one backing from the public in this country. On May 9 and 10, a cross section of 1,385 households was asked: "All in all, do you favor or oppose President Nixon's summit trip to Russia?"

NIXON SUMMIT TO MOSCOW
	May	February
Favor	72	74	Per cent
Oppose	18	13	Per cent
Not sure	10	13

Despite the heightened conflict over American mining of Haiphong Harbor, designed to stop Soviet shipments of supplies to North Vietnam, better than seven in 10 continue to favor the latest Presidential journey to a Communist capital. However, recognition of the tensions between the world's superpowers was evident in this question:

"Do you feel relations between the United States and Russia are improving, getting worse, or are about the same as they have been?"

TREND OF U.S.-SOVIET RELATIONS
	Improving	Getting Worse	About Same	Not Sure
May, '72	20	10	57	5
Feb., '72	39	7	48	6
June, '71	38	4	52	6
Sept., '70	28	7	57	8
Oct., '68	18	14	63	5

It is evident that the conflict over Vietnam dampened previously growing optimism over relations between the U.S. and Russia, with an 11-point decline in the number who felt relations were "improving." But the prevailing mood is still not as tense as it was during the Johnson Administration days in 1968.

Still, the public's expectation of major breakthroughs at the summit talks has remained essentially cautious. People were asked: "Do you expect major agreements from President Nixon's summit trip to Moscow, minor agreements, or no agreements at all?"

EXPECTATIONS FROM SUMMIT
	May	Feb.
Major agreements	6	9
Minor agreements	51	53
No agreements	31	24
Not sure	12	14

It is apparent that President Nixon entered the summit negotiations in an optimistic position, as far as public opinion was concerned. A big majority favored his making the trip, but most did not have high expectations of a major breakthrough. Such a mood maximizes the effect of any concrete results achieved and politically cushions diplomatic disappointments.

Underlying American public opinion is the sense that it is possible for the world's two superpowers to work out a long-term way to live in peace, no matter how limited the agreements which might be reached at this summit conference. The cross section was asked: "Do you think it is possible for the U.S. and Russia to come to a long-term agreement in the world which will work, or do you feel it is not possible for that to happen?"

The persistent underpinning of the public's outlook is essentially optimistic for Soviet-American relations, despite temporary set-backs and tensions. There is little doubt that President Nixon's policy of pursuing summit meetings is widely supported. This was evident when people were asked to take a retrospective look at his earlier visit to China: "In general, do you approve or disapprove of President Nixon having gone to China to meet with the leaders of that country?"

NIXON CHINA VISIT
	Total	Public
	Per cent	Per cent

Despite the difficulties, strains, and potential pitfalls, it is obvious that the American people lay real store by summitry by their President. Implicit in these results is a sense that it is far better to seek out agreements, no matter how limited, between the superpowers of East and West, rather than to face nuclear confrontations

America was born and raised in a Ford.

Now it's coming home again.

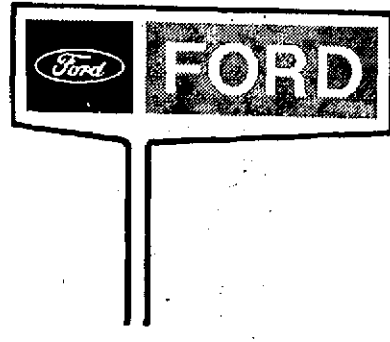

It was before your time, you say? These days it was before almost everyone's time. But it meant something, the Ford name on a car. Because it was so much more than the name. It was the idea.

The Ford idea is their idea. Many of them have been at it almost since the first Fords took to the road. How do you live up to an idea that's a legend as well? You do more than tune a nation's engines—you tune in to its needs. You take your old rumble seat concept, turn it sideways, and come up with the Pinto Runabout, a nifty economy car with a big rear loading compartment. You make the Maverick, a magnificently uncomplicated car that doesn't need a team of experts to keep on humming along. You make the Torino, the Mustang, the Galaxie, the LTD and the Thunderbird beautiful—but you shape that beauty by common sense and safety. You build each one right. And you follow through locally to keep it right. The idea is as simple as it ever was. And it's taking a lot of heads out of the clouds and bringing them back home. To Ford.

It began in a day when roads were little more than cowpaths and stagecoach trails. And if you wanted to go west like the man said, it took months to get there. The idea was simple enough: Let's put America on powered wheels. Let's get them out of their horse-and-buggies and give them a chance to really move. Let's put together...what'll we call it, an Automobile?...a moving machine that will cost less to own than a couple of fillies. Let's then make sure the machine keeps moving. Let's build it right. And make it easy to keep right. That was the Ford idea. That is the Ford idea. Ford is no longer building its cars out back of the house. But it's still a family business. We don't mean the Henry Ford family alone. We mean the people who build and service and sell Ford cars for a living.

Church 'torches' mortgage

TOBYHANNA — The Tobyhanna United Methodist Church was dedicated Sunday with a special dedicatory service featuring the preschool and beginners group, junior and senior choirs, the Young Christians and the U.S. Army Tobylones.

The church was completely destroyed by fire February 25, 1965. The congregation met for a while in St. Ann's Hall, and then at the Army Depot chapel. The first service in the new church was held on June 11, 1967.

Many folks in the area contributed toward the erecting of a new church structure. The Eastern Methodist Conference, Bishop Fred Pierce Corson, many groups, the congregation and insurance all contributed in many ways.

Bishop J. Gordon Howard was represented by District Superintendent, Rev. Harvey W. Marsland, who officiated.

Rev. Clyde W. Sholtzberger, pastor of the church for the past six years during the planning, building and paying off the mortgage looks upon the whole effort "as a manifestation of God's Spirit working through people of many religious persuasions."

American Jewish unit sees U.S. fragmented, not split

By United Press International

Four years ago, the American Jewish Committee set up a national project to promote better mutual understanding among different types of Americans.

Its original goal was to curb the polarization of America into antagonistic black and white societies.

But experience has taught leaders of the AJC's Institute on Human Relations that, as they put it in a recent report, "American society is beginning to appear fragmented, not merely split in two."

Moreover, while a start has been made in recent years toward honest communication between whites and blacks, very little has yet been done to break down stereotyped thinking which inhibits mutual understanding among other groups.

Take, for example, the lately popular term "ethnic Americans." It has become a verbal umbrella under which are grouped such extremely diverse people as a wealthy Greek-American physician who attends an Orthodox Church and a Polish-American factory worker who goes to Mass at a Roman Catholic Church. In short, the term "ethnic" conjures up a false image of a group identity that does not actually exist.

As the Christian Century magazine pointed out recently, the worst thing about this word "ethnic" is that it tends to create a new division in society by drawing a distinction between "ethnics" and "WASPs," or white Anglo-Saxon Protestants.

No minority in contemporary American society is as freely labeled as "WASPs." The stereotype depicts them as well-educated white collar workers who make good incomes and live in nice, clean, segregated suburban homes, from which they look down scornfully on all other Americans.

There are some white Protestants, wholly or partly of British ancestry, who may fit that stereotype. But there are millions more who work at blue collar jobs and who live in small towns, run-down sections of big cities or the impoverished backwoods of Appalachia. Life for the vast majority of these "WASPs" is a continuing struggle for survival under pressures that differ little in kind or degree from those bearing in upon blacks and "ethnics."

Another sweeping generalization that has become popular in the news media and in the conversation of people who like to think themselves aware is reflected in the term "youth culture." Those who use it usually indicate, by the context of their remarks, that they are thinking of the mores, attitudes and political orientation of college students.

But it is an inexcusable stereotype to identify all young people with this "youth culture." In the first place, the AJC Institute of Human Relations points out, almost 70 per cent of Americans age 18-24 are not students.

Jehovah's Witnesses set annual gathering

EAST STROUDSBURG — "Being Conscience of Our Spiritual Needs" will be the theme of the coming semi-annual Christian gathering of Jehovah's Witnesses at their assembly site, Buckingham, Pa., June 2 to 4, said Stephen P. Bortlik, presiding minister of the East Stroudsburg congregation.

Pennsylvania Circuit No. 2 now consists of 24 congregations. Because of the growth of Jehovah's Witnesses, the Watchtower Society, with central offices in Brooklyn, N.Y., has arranged duplicate programs for three consecutive weekends. Eight congregations from this area will attend on the above dates.

Russell A. MacPhee, district supervisor and Kenneth C. Alms, circuit supervisor, have been working together to coordinate the program with talks, dramas and demonstrations so that all attending will be spiritually strengthened for the ministerial work ahead.

Speaking on the theme of the assembly, Bortlik pointed out that "at no other time in the history of man has the general awareness and evidence been so great that man has been misdirected and misguided spiritually. Many of those who should have spiritually strengthened the people have taken active part in world affairs and so have contributed to the present unrest, frustration and insecurity. However, those conscious of their spiritual needs can now turn to a proper source, God's own Word and associate with the ever increasing number of Witnesses to have their needs properly satisfied."

The highlight of the assembly will be the sermon "Are You Marked for Survival?" to be given Sunday, June 4 at 2 p.m. by MacPhee. All sessions are free and open.

Okinawa strikers want boss out — with their jobs

NAHA, Okinawa, Japan (UPI)—Okinawa may be the only place in the world where striking workers carry picket signs telling the boss to abolish his business—and their jobs.

The boss is the U.S. Defense Department. It operates 87 military bases on Okinawa and the other 71 islands of the Ryukyu chain south of Japan. The business is shipping everything from troops to trucks to toilet paper to the war in Indochina.

The pickets belong to the All-Okinawa Garrison Workers Union (Zengunro). It claims the loyalty of 25,000 Japanese who work at the bases, mostly in Okinawa. Their tasks range from repairing military hardware to sweeping floors.

"All U.S. bases out!" say the picket signs.

The pickets will still be marching often, even though the United States returned the Ryukyus to Japan May 15 after 27 years of American rule. The pattern of sporadic strikes and harassments of the American bases, especially in Okinawa, has grown increasingly intense during the past two years.

The whole idea of striking to get fired seems contradictory. American visitors to Okinawa have laughed at it for years, mostly because they didn't understand the situation.

Zengunro's leaders swim in the current of Japan's left-wing opposition, principally the Socialist and Communist parties. Those parties want a Socialist Asia with the Americans out.

The leaders know this goal will not be achieved in Japan soon. Meantime, their tactic is to harass and hamstring the American bases in both Japan and the Ryukyus in every possible way.

About 30 per cent of Japan's voters support the Socialist and Communist parties at election time. They do not govern the country, because the American-oriented Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) has a majority in Parliament.

"The strategic importance of Okinawa is a geographical fact," says Lt. Gen. James Lampert, last of six military high commissioners to rule the Ryukyus for the United States. "It depends on weather, terrain and people. Those things won't change."

As long as the Ryukyus were under American rule, Japan had no say about how the bases were used. Now they come under the terms of the U.S.-Japan security treaty. It calls for "prior consultation" between the Japanese and American governments if the Americans employ the bases against a third country.

In Japan proper, Prime Minister Eisaku Sato and Foreign Minister Takeo Fukuda have interpreted "prior consultation" loosely.

Opposition parties objected when the carrier USS Constellation was sent to the Tonkin Gulf from the U.S. Navy base at Yokosuka in Tokyo Bay. They complained again when Phantom jets flew from Japan's main island of Honshu to Vietnam after the current North Vietnamese offensive began. Fukuda retorts that these are mere troop and plane movements, not military operations that require "prior consultation."

South Vietnamese tanks steadily are being repaired at Atsugi, 25 miles southwest of Tokyo. Japanese officials blandly say they are American tanks as long as they are in Japan. The May 15 reversion ceremony was hardly over before Socialist deputies complained in Parliament of refueling of Vietnam-bound B52s from Guam by American KC135 tankers from Okinawa. "The foreign office makes it plain that refueling of planes in the air is not a matter of prior consultation," Fukuda said. The question is how long this attitude can be kept up. Chobyo Yara, 69, governor of what is now Japan's new Okinawa province, was in Tokyo three days after reversion. Yara asked Sato to work for reduction of the American bases there.

'Saturday Night Special' issue tells much about NRA

(Editor's Note: This is the third of a series of articles on guns, where people get them, what people do with them, and what people think about them.)

By STANFORD N. SESSER
Dow Jones - Ottaway News
WASHINGTON — The National Rifle Association, according to a statement last fall by its executive vice president, "concurs in principle with the desirability of removing from the marketplace crudely made and unsafe handguns."

Since the NRA is the kingpin of the alliance of hunters, target shooters and gun manufacturers, commonly dubbed the "gun lobby," it would seem that a bill to outlaw the production and sale of "Saturday-Night Specials" — the cheap handguns used for murders, frequently on Saturday nights — would sail through Congress.

Instead, little progress has been made on such a measure since extensive Senate subcommittee hearings late last summer.

The answer to this puzzle tells a lot about the reasoning of the million-member NRA.

Frank C. Daniel, the organization's secretary, explains that the NRA has been unable to support a specific bill because no one has been able to come up with a definition of a Saturday-Night

Special that the group could agree with.

He says that handguns can't be banned on the basis of safety because "there's no unsafe firearm in the market to our knowledge today." Prices can't be used, he adds, because the cost of a gun "has nothing to do" with its danger.

What about banning those handguns that the NRA's magazine, The American Rifleman, refuses to take ads for? Says Daniel: "It's one thing limiting advertising in a private magazine and another imposing the standards on a whole society."

Finally, the NRA executive complains about the whole notion of singling out certain handguns. "The term itself is meaningless," he says. "What's a Saturday-Night Special to one person is a highly desirable firearm to someone else."

To the many critics of the NRA, such statements provide insight into the strategy that has maintained the power of the gun lobby.

The NRA, they maintain, claims publicly it only opposes measures that hinder the sportsman, while privately it musters its considerable resources to fight every piece of gun legislation, no matter what the intent.

"They oppose all legislation because they figure the ultimate step is the confiscation of guns," says Carl Perian, a former professor of criminology who headed the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee staff that drew up the federal Gun Control Act of 1968.

"Their ultimate strategy is, if we hold them here, we won't have to hold them there." Or as a member of Sen. Edward Kennedy's legislative staff puts it: "You start talking about stopping criminals, and the NRA immediately says you're trying to take guns away from us."

NRA officials scoff at the notion that their organization wields the tremendous power attributed to it by its critics. They say only about $100,000 of the NRA's $7.7 million annual budget goes for legislative activities, with the vast bulk of resources devoted to such activities as staging shooting tournaments, conducting hunting and conservation activities, and publishing "The American Rifleman."

"Our members do the (legislative) work for us," says Jack Basil, director of the NRA legislative service. "All we do is keep our members advised about what's going on."

But Perian sees things differently. "The NRA is a very efficient minority," he declares. "Look at their new headquarters building and the money they spread around. If the NRA didn't exist, this country would be equal with all the civilized nations in the world in sharply restricting the use of ammunition and firearms."

A close look at the operations of the NRA indicates there's some truth to both views. No matter what the amount spent on lobbying, the influence of the NRA is demonstrably immense.

The organization boasts at least 35 congressmen as members, a number of sympathizers in the White House and key government agencies, and a 150-member affiliate gun club that operates from the office of the Secretary of Defense (the club's head says none of the highest-ranking Defense Department officials have joined).

Altogether, the NRA has 12,000 affiliated local and state gun clubs around the nation.

President Nixon became an NRA life member in 1967, and, although the White House claims he resigned after the 1968 election, the NRA's Daniel says that "Nixon's membership is still a matter of record. We never received notification he resigned."

While the Pentagon in 1968 ended its long-standing and controversial support of the NRA's national rifle and pistol championships, the Army still quietly lends 10,000 rifles worth $42 each to local NRA-affiliated gun clubs and each year supplies their members with 8.4 million free bullets worth $84,000.

Tall and gawky

By Jean Adams

WE TALL ONES: (Q.) A girl wrote you about her fat lips. In answering her you listed some troubles she didn't have. One thing you told her was that she was not "tall and gawky."

Why do you have to associate those two words? In behalf of the tall girls of America, let me say that I wholeheartedly resent this. Not all tall girls are gawky and not all gawky girls are tall. In our town there is a group of girls known as the High Steppers. To be a member of this club a girl must be tall. Every member is lovely.

In the future we tall girls would appreciate your not giving readers the impression that to be tall is an affliction. For years I was considered tall at five-seven. Now my daughter is five-ten and is a perfectly beautiful reason for my resenting aspersions on tall girls.

What you said about fat was OK, big and heavy, OK, heavy thighs or monstrous hips, OK. You are apparently not tall yourself or you could never have written the words "tall and gawky."

Tall and Certainly Not Gawky in Connecticut

(A.) I am the same height as your daughter, five feet 10 inches tall. Five-ten is beautiful when all is in correct proportion, gracefully carried and tastefully adorned.

But your letter is proof that we tall girls have to be especially careful not to be awkward or ungainly, which are synonyms for gawky.

You seem to be a little sensitive about your height. I hope that every girl or woman who fears she is too fat or too big or too heavy in general or too heavy in the thighs or too monstrous in the hips won't write and accuse me of picking on her.

I also hope that any too-fat or too-big or too-heavy or too-hippy or too-thick-thighed or too-gawky girl or woman who reads this will realize it is time to go to work on herself, and do so. Whether she is short, medium or tall in height.

Cabinet has storage

Special storage features are sometimes overlooked by furniture designers, but here's a built-it-yourself cabinet that serves several needs. It is a sideboard that can be used for a buffet meal. The cabinet section, left, has vertical dividers. Use them for over-size dinner plates and trays or for records. The center section is open

Oriental chains for downspouts

NEW YORK (UPI) — Modern architects are using an age-old Oriental trick to eliminate unsightly, cloggable downspouts. Lengths of quarter-inch chain is substituted, reaching from a six-inch sleeve through the roof line to the ground. The bottom end of the chain can hang free, if desired, but usually is anchored either to a ring in a concrete splash slab or to a stake firmly fixed in a gravel bed six inches deep. A combination of gravity and capillary attraction makes the rainwater run downward along the chain. Chains long have been used for this purpose in Malaysia, India and China.

eye-catching exterior — but without complicated construction that would add unduly to building costs.

All-on-one-floor living has many advantages

By JOHN D. BLOODGOOD
All-on-one-floor living has decided advantages, and here's a design that makes the most of them. The entrance court, sur-

Mobile homes hit by wind

NEW YORK (UPI) — High winds pose a very real threat to mobile home owners; experience recently in Colorado and Alabama indicates the need for proper anchoring. T. Lawrence Jones, president of the American Insurance Association, says. Windstorms struck Fort Rucker, Ala., and Boulder, Colo., damaging or destroying more than 700 mobile homes, injuring more than 80 persons and killing four. Dollar loss to mobile homes in Colorado alone was put at more than $700,000, Jones said. He said on-site inspection in Boulder showed damage to tied down mobile homes came from wind driven debris and generally was minor except in the case of three tied down homes that were destroyed by unsecured homes being blown into them. On the other hand, 26 homes that hadn't been tied down were totally destroyed. This demonstrates, Jones said, the importance of the tie-down regulations to apply to every mobile home. American Insurance Association, he said, has developed a model ordinance for such anchoring with turnbuckles and metal cables or straps, measures he says would enable mobile homes to withstand most high windstorms without turning over. He called upon the federal government to lead the way by promoting such ordinances, starting with government-provided mobile homes, and urged mobile home park owners and individuals to take such precautions even where the law does not require tie-downs. While recognizing the futility of trying to protect against direct tornado damage with even the most stringent tie-down ordinance, There's no place like home but youth asks which one?

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS
NEW YORK (UPI) — There's no place like home, but the young folks may very well ask — which one? The average young couple probably will own three or four — or more — houses during their lifetime. Jackson W. Goss, president of Investors Mortgage Insurance Co., Boston, says "the old home theme of song and story may become only a fond memory" as we become more and more a mobile people.

"We are a people constantly on the move," he said. "The average career manager professional in 1960 could expect to hold three different jobs — make at least three moves. The average now has risen to 4.2 jobs and continues to rise. Each job move — well, that means a new home." Goss said he sees a pattern developing, based on recent government and private housing surveys. It starts with about 76 per cent of all newly-married couples living in rental housing — primarily apartments. It progresses on through the first home with the advent of children — a need for more privacy. "We found," he said, "many couples, in their first home, look forward to when they can move into their next home — one with features and conveniences they could not afford at first." Goss said a survey of 2,000 young couples in their first home indicated 68 per cent of them had at least one child and "most of them expect to have more children." "While 31 per cent reported their current home adequate for current needs," he said, "more than 55 per cent reported they were actively looking for a larger house." The trend continued after the move into a second house, Goss said. A survey of home owners in five major markets who were in their third homes showed 83 per cent had moved because they needed, or wanted, more space. At the same time, 83 per cent said a more, expensive home in a better neighborhood was a better investment — in light of their experiences in their first two homes. About 71 per cent reported that promotion, advancement in career and higher income prompted them to move up, Goss said. A survey of the 45-54 and 55-64 age brackets, he said, disclosed that 54 per cent of homeowners in these groups have purchased three or more homes in their lifetime. And, Goss said, 29 per cent either owned leisure homes for vacation or holiday use or as tax shelters. He noted 79 per cent of the homeowners in these age brackets had college-age children, 22 per cent indicated they would be moving to a smaller house after the children had all left home. The arrival and departure of children, the desire for more room and privacy, a job move, an improvement in financial position, desire to improve social position.

BANKAMERICA

Jack O'Brian's

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Bette Davis — seriously, but with jokes — may play Las Vegas. Only Vegas, just for the $100,000 a week fun of it. . . James Mason's mighty inked at Pamela. Wants to see their kids more often. Pamela's inked at James marrying the much younger lass. . . Groucho taped his lowa State lunacy-concert. Word is, it's hilarious.

Portraitist David Hockney turned down a commission to paint Lee Radziwill's phizz. The part we doubt is an alleged offer of $25,000. . . Raquel Welch wears just a poncho and a gun in her "Hannie Caulder" Western. And her contract lets her okay every still used. . . Jack Warden was so worn out rehearsing "Death of a Salesman" in Chicago that he napped — and slept right through his Emmy award-winning. Pile of wires arriving next morning got him up.

"Different Times" was kept running three weeks with an infusion of $100,000 by producer-director-librettist-composer-lyricist Michael Brown's Texas backers. Had to play three weeks or, by pact, RCA wouldn't have recorded the flop musical's cast-album. . . Its potential gross was $75,000 a week, and it hauled in a little more than $12,000 last stanza.

New film will be titled "Between Dallas & Fort Worth There Is a Town Called Arlington." Roger Davis of "Alias Smith & Jones" is preparing the script. . . Woman said to Pearl Bailey,

"55! You don't look it!" Replied Pearl, "And I don't intend to, honey". . . She's a sensation at the Americana's Royal Box, best floor show of the Bdwy. year; any year.

While cops tried to get to the aid of a muggee on 42nd near 8th Ave., another witless wanderer was hugger-mugged on the other side of that tawdry street. . . Rodney Dangerfield tests his tidier TV material not in his own raffish jemt (too clean for that!) but at Pip's, a tiny Sheephead Bay, Brooklyn club. . . Elvis has 80 smash records staring him in the bank. His backlog of postponed RCA income almost is beyond counting, but Col. Parker doesn't mind. . . Rock singer Mama Lion is actor MacDonald Carey's sprig.

Jimmy Cagney gets a dozen scripts a month from hopeful producers, and won't do any of them. Most tempting: agent Bill McCaffery brought him the offer to play "Falstaff" in the Connecticut Shakespeare festival. Jim refused. "Can't make the weight," Jim sighed. . . "Ja know Jim's wife's name is Bill?"

The new Chinese spot Ruby Foos is getting the celebs: Barbra Streisand was there with and after Eli Wallach and Anne Jackson finished acting for the evening in the next-door (Alvin Theater) "Promenade All"; and over there sat Archie Bunker's wife, Jean Stapleton, and — but not together — ballet's Rudolf Nureyev. . . Nureyev must be feeling his advanced age. Doesn't hit the discotecks every midnight as of yore.

Every year Miami Beach hotels insist they won't orbit stratospheric spending on floor show stars next year; said it last year but now it's this year and for one, impresario Morris Lansburgh already has linked for next season Sonny & Cher, Liberace and Sheeky Greene; Sheeky's the new uncrowned best of all nightclub clowns. The rest just run for place and show.

Clifford Irving's temporary help, Baroness Nina Van

Pallandt, will have the inevitable book: all about her "first 40 years." Her movie job came as a stroke of luck. Three film firms were offered her talents (acting, this time) and shrugged.

Filip Wilson learned Liz Taylor's grandma: "Good thing Social Security covers caviar," he flipped. . . Americans spent $21.2 billion a year on liquor and tobacco, only $7 billion per annum on all Federal, state and local police jails, courts, prosecutors etc. Booze & Butts win three to one over law & order.

Rumors of a partner busbup of Larry Kasha and Joe Kipness seem a few years premature: they're producing the musical version of "Two for the Seesaw," with a score by Dorothy Fields and Cy Coleman (they collaborated on "Sweet Charity") and a book by Michael Stewart, whose credits are impressive ("Hello, Dolly!", "Bye Bye Birdie", "Carnival" and the forgettable "George M."). . . Opens on Bdwy around Christmas; no stars picked yet, but a possibility would be Barbra Streisand or the lass bounced into greatness in the original tuneless "Seesaw." Anne Italiano. That's Anne Bancroft, who proved on TV she can sing, too. . . Detroit will see "Seesaw" before Bdwy.

H'wood's Ronda Barrett had better duck meeting Tonight's Ed McMahon. . . Britain's biggest showman, Sir Lew Grade, wants Peter Sellers for a TV series.

Ann Landers

Job advice

Dear Ann Landers: I work in the personnel office of a small company and am writing in the hope that you will print my letter before graduation. I have some advice for individuals who will be looking for employment. It is amazing how many people come in here ill-prepared. Here are some suggestions which might make the difference between getting the job and not getting it.

1. Bring something to write with — preferably a pen. If your handwriting is poor, print.

2. Answer all questions to the best of your ability. The firm, no matter how large or small, asks questions for a reason.

3. Have your social security number with you and —

4. If you are a male, your selective service number.

5. Be able to list the schools you've attended (starting with elementary) and the dates of attendance.

6. Be prepared to trace your employment record, including beginning dates and quitting dates, names of employers, location, positions held and salary.

7. Be prepared to list at least three people (besides employers) who will give character references. Know their addresses and telephone numbers.

I have been in a position to observe a great deal of embarrassment and disappointment because people couldn't meet the simple requirements listed above. The candidate who has to go home and come back with facts and figures is going to lose out to one who has the information at his fingertips. I've observed, too, Ann, that the person who is prepared has an air of confidence that makes a good first impression.

Gainesville

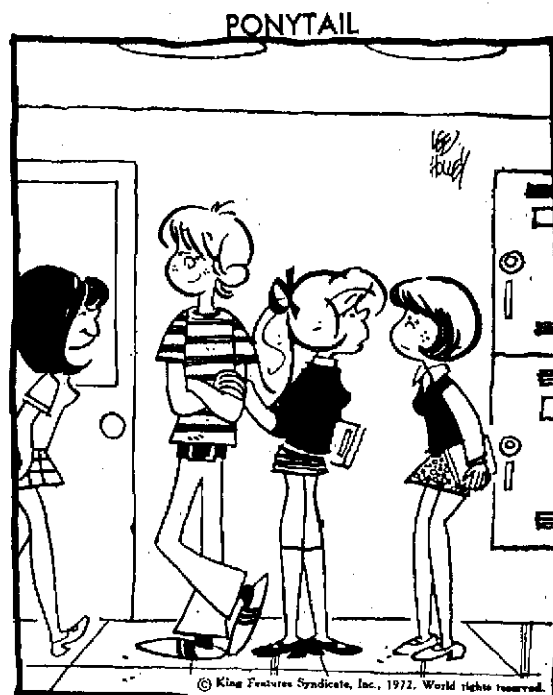

Dear Gainesville: (What an appropriate signature!) And now I'd like to add a suggestion of my own.

I'm aware that many capable, bright young people wear their hair long, have beards and dress non-establishment. I am also aware that there are laws forbidding discrimination against a job candidate because he has long hair and a beard. But if an employer doesn't like your looks, the chances of being hired are sharply reduced. So if you really want the job, don't apply for it with a chip on your shoulder the size of a gangplank.

Confidential to Miserable, Unhappy and Insignificant: Try to be pleasant and uncomplaining. Thirteen is a horrible age for a girl who has a sister sixteen. I promise that life will be brighter when you are sixteen and she is nineteen.

What's prudish? What's O.K.? If you aren't sure, you need some help. It's available in the booklet: "Necking and Petting — What Are the Limits?" Mail your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

"As near as I can figure it — Wally is about 45 percent serious about me."
